APPENDIX A:
	MINIMUM STANDARDS FOR INTERNATIONAL CENTRE (IC) ACCREDITATION.....	6

1. INTRODUCTION

This document must be read in conjunction with the Accreditation Handbook September 2012.

BAC International Centre accreditation is a voluntary quality assurance scheme for independent providers of further and higher education and vocational training courses for institutions operating outside the United Kingdom. The aim of this scheme is to acknowledge institutions and training providers which are outstanding in their field and which enjoy local or international recognition, and to allow them the opportunity to become accredited by a globally-recognised accreditation body.

Please note: there is a separate BAC accreditation scheme for those institutions operating outside the UK which have a formal collaborative partnership with UK universities or which offer HE programmes leading to recognised UK degrees and awards.

2. Eligibility for accreditation

All education institutions operating outside the UK are eligible to apply for International Centre accreditation provided that all of the following requirements are met. (Any international higher education institution considering submitting an application for accreditation should first refer to the scheme document for International Higher Education accreditation to see if they meet the eligibility criteria for that particular scheme.)

- The institution is licensed by a local, regional or national licensing agency, if such licensing is mandatory or holds accreditation from a nationally-recognised educational or professional body.
- The institution offers teaching in English.
- The institution is not fully publicly funded.
- The institution predominantly teaches learners aged 16 or over.
- Effective control of the institution is the responsibility of an accountable management.
- The institution is led by a proprietor or designated principal/director, who must have clear contractual responsibilities for the running of the institution and for the quality of its work.
- There are no grounds for believing the proprietor, principal/director or any other senior manager to be unfit to have responsibility for the institution.
- The institution has provided a relevant education programme for a minimum period of two years. Exceptionally, BAC may approve accreditation at an earlier date, although this would normally only be available to institutions which are part of a larger organisation which itself meets the above requirements.

The final decision regarding an institution's eligibility for the accreditation scheme rests with BAC.

2.1 Additional conditions for International Centre accreditation

- Accreditation relates only to a specific institution and may not be used in relation to larger organisations unless all branches have been awarded accreditation. BAC reserves the right to decide whether it is more appropriate for organisations to seek accreditation in toto or in respect of their separate parts. Unless BAC determines otherwise, where an accredited institution is a branch of a larger organisation, accreditation will relate only to the branch institution. Groups of institutions which wish to apply for accreditation for all their centres must first contact the BAC office to discuss their application.

- Accreditation by BAC does not remove the obligations of accredited institutions to comply with relevant local statutory and regulatory requirements.
- Any contractual agreements between BAC and an accredited institution, or any disputes arising out of the award, refusal or withdrawal of accreditation by BAC, shall be subject to English law.
- BAC's evaluation of the institution will not assess the role of the awarding body itself and will not include, for instance, an assessment of the curriculum, the assessment procedures used in determining the final grades awarded or the quality management procedures used by the awarding body.
- In the course of the inspection, programmes which are ancillary to the main education programmes (such as language support or the development of study and research skills) will also be evaluated.

3. Accreditation process

BAC's International Centre accreditation scheme covers the full range of activities provided by a college or similar institution, and is not restricted to specific courses within the total operation. An institution is awarded accreditation for a period of three years, subject to a satisfactory interim inspection and its meeting all the responsibilities of an accredited institution (see the Accreditation Handbook September 2012). This accreditation does not extend to activities which take place outside the institution itself (for instance, franchised programmes, satellite summer schools or separate branches, or which are promoted and delivered under a different name, unless BAC has given specific approval for the inclusion of such activities within the institution's accreditation.

Accreditation is based on an inspection of the full range of an institution's provision and also requires evidence that the management will maintain acceptable standards during the period of accreditation and operate within the requirements of any relevant local legislation. Institutions will be assessed against the full, standard set of inspection criteria described below and must meet all of the minimum standards.

Prospective applicants are invited to contact BAC's head office staff to discuss their eligibility for the scheme. Following this, the institution is required to send in an initial submission which requires evidence to be produced of financial stability and viability, provenance, recognition and accreditation achieved and references attesting to the outstanding reputation of the institution. If BAC is satisfied that the eligibility criteria have been met, institutions are asked to submit a formal application. This rigorous application process with its different levels of scrutiny is designed to ensure that applications which are not of the required standard do not expend time and effort preparing the full application documentation. There is no right of appeal at this stage of the application process.

Once an application has been received and processed, the Head of Professional Services will assess whether a preliminary visit is necessary. A preliminary visit will particularly be important when BAC has not previously accredited institutions in the country in which the institution is operating, as meetings with local regulatory bodies will be required. BAC will make the final decision on whether a preliminary visit is required. Once the preliminary visit is satisfactorily concluded, a full inspection will be arranged. This may follow immediately after the preliminary visit or be arranged for a time to be agreed following the preliminary visit.

4. Accreditation cycle

Accredited institutions must apply for reaccreditation every three years and will then undergo a further full inspection. In considering a report on an accredited institution, the Accreditation Committee may either award reaccreditation for another three years, defer a decision pending the resolution of minor issues, or withdraw accreditation from the institution should it have failed to maintain the standards required. Whatever the outcome, the inspection report is released to the institution along with the decision of the Accreditation Committee.

5. Inspection process

The primary method for assessing whether an institution meets the standards required for accreditation is an on-site inspection carried out by independent inspectors who are appointed and trained by BAC. No institution will be awarded accreditation or reaccreditation without full inspection of its provision as described within the four areas of assessment.

Minimum standards

Appendix A sets out the minimum standards required of an accredited institution, as well as clarifying the likely scope of an inspection and the specific items assessed by BAC's inspectors. Your institution should use these sections as a basis for self-evaluation before the inspection.

The areas assessed at a full inspection are grouped into four sections:

- Management, Staffing and Administration
- Teaching, Learning and Assessment
- Learner Welfare
- Premises and Facilities

Management of quality and the institution's quality assurance procedures are assessed throughout each area of inspection.

Document review and interviews

As well as setting out the minimum standards required, a list of the documents required for each section is also included. The inspectors will need to see all this documentation, where relevant, as a part of their evaluation as to whether the institution meets BAC's minimum standards for international accreditation. Some of these documents must be included with the initial submission and application form; others must be made available during the inspection. Each section also lists the staff who should be available for interview on topics relevant to that section, although it is accepted that some may be unavoidably absent. If there is no staff member with the specific responsibility indicated, the principal/director or nominated head of the institution will be assumed to fulfill that role.

Legal and regulatory compliance

All new applicants and those applying for reaccreditation are required to sign a declaration stating that the institution complies with all relevant statutory requirements in force in the country of operation, in connection with such matters as health and safety, safeguarding, employment law, copyright, disability provision, equal opportunities, planning consent, data protection and public liability. It is the institution's responsibility and the personal responsibility of the head of the institution to ensure that all requirements are met. BAC inspectors will not inspect the above areas but will note any observed breach of regulations. This will be conveyed to the Accreditation Committee as a 'no confidence' judgement in the ability of the institution to self assess in these matters and will call into question the integrity of the senior management who will have endorsed the declaration. Although the compliance with statutory requirements is not a BAC minimum standard, evidence of non-compliance will provide the Accreditation Committee with grounds for refusal of accreditation.

A report of the full inspection is considered by the Accreditation Committee, which decides to award or refuse accreditation based on the evidence of whether all minimum standards have been met.

Any institution which has been unsuccessful in either gaining or retaining accreditation may appeal against the decision of the Accreditation Committee.

6. Programmes and awards

6.1 BAC's approach

BAC does not validate or accredit qualifications. BAC's policy is that institutions should offer courses leading to external awards granted by recognised awarding bodies. BAC does however accept that there may be instances where no appropriate external awarding body approves the awards (see below).

6.2 Degrees

If an institution is offering an award which is "described as a degree", it must have had degree-awarding powers officially bestowed upon it by the relevant regional or national educational agency. Before a private institution can offer courses leading to degrees, it must enter into a formal partnership agreement with a body which has accredited degree-awarding powers and is itself accredited by a recognised accrediting agency. This would normally be a national agency or, in the case of US degrees, a body recognised by the US Council for Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA). Institutions must clearly state the awarding university on all publicity material. Furthermore, institutions should not advertise pathways to a degree as a degree award.

If an institution is considering entering into a partnership enabling the offer of degree programmes, it is strongly recommended that BAC is contacted to ensure that the awarding body meets BAC's requirements. Institutions offering courses leading to degrees awarded by an overseas body should be aware that they need to show that they have taken reasonable steps to inform the person to whom the award was granted or any member of the public or particular individual to whom the offer or invitation was addressed that the award was not granted or to be granted by a national institution. Thus publicity material must state the location of the degree awarding body.

6.3 Internal awards

BAC's inspectors will consider the accuracy of any claims made by institutions as to the level and status of their internal awards. This will include a requirement for evidence of the extent to which the institution's internal awards are accepted for the purposes of employment or further study. BAC encourages institutions to involve external moderators in the assessment of learners, but accepts that there may be instances where this is inappropriate.

7. Accreditation fees

Accredited institutions are required to pay annual accreditation fees which are due in September each year. The exact fee payable depends on the number of learners enrolled at the institution over the previous year. Accurate enrolment figures must be supplied to BAC once per year on request. If such figures are not supplied by the deadline given, the full maximum accreditation fee will be charged. Failure to pay the annual accreditation fees by the deadline given on the invoice will result in suspension and the possible withdrawal of accreditation.

8. Accreditation statements and marks

Institutions which have been awarded accreditation may use the following statements of accreditation in their promotional materials, subject to certain conditions:

- "accredited by the British Accreditation Council for Independent Further and Higher Education as an International Centre"
- "accredited by the British Accreditation Council as an International Centre"
- "accredited by BAC as an International Centre"
- "BAC accredited as an International Centre"

The further following conditions apply:

- Accreditation covers all eligible provision which you have declared to BAC.
- Accreditation applies to your institution as a whole and must not be construed as accreditation or validation of individual programmes or awards.
- Accreditation applies only to the specific institution whose application BAC received and not to any partner, branch or otherwise connected institutions.
- You must avoid any inaccurate or misleading statements concerning your accreditation and if uncertain should contact BAC to seek clarification on what is acceptable. Any breach of this condition may lead to the suspension or withdrawal of your accreditation.
- If your accreditation is withdrawn you must remove all statements or claims of accreditation by BAC from your promotional and other material as soon as is reasonably practicable and must immediately refrain from representing yourself as BAC accredited.

- Unaccredited institutions which have applied for accreditation must not make public reference to their application. Any breach of this condition may be taken into account in any subsequent decision on accreditation.

Once accredited, institutions may use the BAC accreditation mark of the International Centre accreditation scheme in their promotional materials, subject to certain conditions. The standard accreditation mark features the BAC logo, colour-coded to the specific accreditation scheme, and the word 'accredited'.
